From the Rector's Desk

Dear Parishioners,

I have just been reading a most disturbing article and yet it was a most inspiring and challenging one. It came from a missionary who communicates with me regularly and part of his letter told of the horrific killings by ISIS; many of those butchered to death are Christians trying to help other people. Of course killings by ISIS are not limited to Christians, but the response of many of the Christian believers is what is really challenging. One Pastor serving in an ISIS controlled area said three men from his church were shot and killed last week because they ran children's clubs in their homes. Then he went on with these striking words:

' Whenever we see disaster and tragedy, we run towards it. We see throughout history that it is in these alarming moments that God works. It is in times of war, not peace, that history is changed. Would any of your churches have ever dreamed that they would be full of Sunni Muslims? Our nets are breaking with those coming to know Jesus despite, or maybe because of, these terrible times!'

It is from the broken soil we produce our crops, from the broken grain we make our bread and from the broken bread we gain our strength. May we see the opportunities in the difficulties we face and in the brokenness find real life. Progress is made by exploiting opportunities not by solving problems. The alabaster jar needed to be broken so the house could be filled with perfume. We do live in a very peaceful undisturbed part of the world but this might not always be the case and Advent is the beginning of the beautiful Christmas story but the real purpose was disturbing - Calvary! It is through that disturbing bit that we get hope!

I am constantly encouraged by the number of you, the parishioners, who volunteer your time and talents for use in these parishes. A brief count reveals that more than seventy people volunteer to be involved in a great variety of ways, some day by day, week by week and some month by month, and that count I guess is not exhaustive. We are indeed very fortunate to have such an engaged group of parishioners who see their involvement as being important. I want to pass on my very sincere and heartfelt thanks to each one because without that commitment your parishes would not and could not be what they are. The important thing is to realise that we are on a journey and that we have only gone some of the road, so let us be positive, open and prayerful about the future. We then will see things we never dreamed of.

The Parish Centre at Newcastle is becoming increasingly more busy and we are delighted to have some rental income from various events run there. It is vitally important that any parish organisations, clubs or groups get their bookings in to Karen before time space gets too fully booked.

Progress never comes cheap and along with the opportunities come the challenges. One of those challenges we must face is the extra cost in running the parishes. Please pray and think seriously about your commitment to your parish. To continue to meet the growing demands and opportunities of ministry open to us we will need to increase our income in the coming year. This is an area that I feel very reluctant to mention. I know there are vast opportunities for growth and pastoral care and we can go much further in meeting the needs of all ages in our parishes. I may visit this area again in the new year.

It is a great privilege to be Rector of these parishes of Newcastle, Newtownmountkennedy and Calary. To feel the genuine support of this community and to benefit from the time and talent of such a great number who help shoulder the challenge of ministry in various ways. I do hope you all have a peaceful Christmas and I look forward to welcoming you to worship and to the various events on the calendar over this very busy period.

William

A Divided Christmas

– managing Christmas after separation

After parents separate one thing that everyone discovers is that special occasions and family celebrations are some of the most difficult times to deal with. The first Christmas after separation is the hardest and as parents struggle to manage their emotions, children and teens will also have concerns about spending Christmas without their other parent.

Christmas is a time when people are more aware of how things used to be and how much has changed. It takes effort and willingness to cooperate at these times when things are not the same or are not how you want them to be. Children and teens will also experience these feelings and giving them an opportunity to talk about this is helpful. Having a positive attitude will help your children in working towards keeping some traditions and being creative with new ideas.

Make a plan:

Putting a plan in place for the Christmas holidays, well ahead of time, can make a difference.

One teenager commented to me about Christmas ..... “Both my parents want me to please them by agreeing to do things their way. It puts me in a battle that I can never win.”

Having a plan for Christmas where children know where they will be and when they will see or have time with their other parent is so important and helps everyone feel more in control. Without knowing or having a plan children and teens are left feeling anxious and upset. Just because they are not talking about it to you as their parent does not mean that it is not very much in their minds. If you have teenagers then include them in a planning discussion. Everyone's opinion is valid and while compromises will need to be made, knowing what is happening will make things easier for everyone.

When making a plan:

Make it open to everyone who is involved.

Be honest

Be creative with ideas and solutions

Be willing to compromise on some things.

Write it down

Let people know what the plan is and what is expected of them.

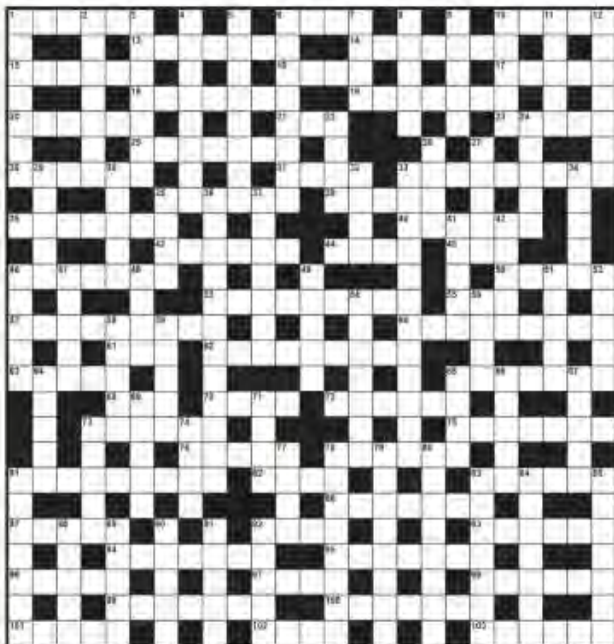

Work at making this Christmas one with good memories.

While there will always be ex-husbands, ex-wives and ex-partners there is no such thing as an ex-child. Parents can sometimes forget how important the other parent is to their child. (Some parents can also forget how important they are to their children.) Without question the single biggest problem for children following their parents' separation is being exposed to continuing parental conflict. A parent who cares deeply for their children often fails to view what is happening through the eyes of their children. Perhaps this Christmas it is worth stopping and making a plan and taking some small steps towards parenting co-operatively over the Christmas period and into the year ahead – the benefits for your children will be worth it.

If anyone, who isn't currently using free will offering envelopes and would like them for 2015, please let me know as soon as possible; they will be available at the back of the churches before Christmas for you to pick up.

It helps the Parish finances considerably if as many people as possible contribute through the envelope and/or Sustentation schemes, as the Parish can claim tax back from the Revenue from all parishioners who contribute €250 or more per annum.

Also, if there are any Sustentation envelopes outstanding I would be grateful to receive them as soon as possible before the end of the year.
